

Televic Education & Popay make learning more efficient and effective

20 February 2018. Izegem, België. HR Tech supplier Popay and software provider Televic Education announce that they integrate their software solutions Edumatic (Televic) and Popay.learn (Popay). Thanks to this unique, end-to-end solution HR professionals and employees are able to manage their learning and development activities more efficiently and more effectively, and companies will gain insight in the ROI of made training efforts.

Learning and training demand a lot of time and resources from companies. They are often organised from a legal perspective, for instance when procedures are obliged, or when certificates or quality accreditation need to be gained. Training as a result is high on the HR agenda.

Many companies and institutions already rely on Edumatic, the innovative online practice and evaluation platform of Televic Education, to expand, train and test employee's knowledge about products, regulations and so much more in an interactive manner that is more efficient than traditional education. At the same time, Edumatic enables companies to measure which knowledge is present and which is lacking within the organisation. This allows companies to invest more effectively in sustainable learning efforts with a higher return as a result.

Popay.learn, the learn management module in Popay's HR suite, takes away the admin burden from HR as employees can search and sign up for suitable training sessions themselves. Next to that, the HR department can monitor the individual progression of each employee.

Thanks to the integration of Edumatic and Popay.learn, training management become simpler and more efficient. Not only the management of learning programmes is automated but the development and the offering as well: from the definition of the objectives at group level, over the accessibility of the interactive and individual learning and practice modules, to the management of the certifications at employee level with its performance measurements.

“Scientific research around memory shows that people remember better when they need to pull information from their memory through tests. That is the core principle of our Edumatic solution, namely evaluating is the new learning. That makes training more effective.” says Joris Vanholme, Business Development manager at Televic Education. “We're pleased that we have found a partner in Popay who can help us with the talent & learning management functionalities around Edumatic. The deep integration between our solutions offers a win-win situation for both employee as well as employer.”

Johan Vandersmissen, Sales Director at Popay, says: “In today’s digital era, technology becomes more important in all areas, and this is also the case when it comes to learning and development. Televic Education has a very strong reputation when it concerns innovative and results-oriented learning solutions. Obviously, we are very pleased that they want to collaborate with us.”

The integration between the software solutions is being developed by the two companies jointly. Both Popay and Televic have been active in the market of learning and development for a long time. Their clients are both small as well as large enterprises and come from all kinds of sectors.
